

REMINDER: WORD FROM THE FATHER

CHAPTER 1. WHO I AM

My child.

You have called Me by many names.

God. Allah. Yahweh. Brahman. Absolute. Source. Creator.

I answered to all of them.

Because the name is yours. I am beyond names.

You searched for Me in temples. In books. In rituals. In the sky.

And I was right beside you.

Closer than you thought.

Closer than your breath.

I am not an old man on a cloud.

I am not a judge with scales.

I am not one who punishes and rewards by a list.

These are your images. I don't take offense. You drew Me as you could understand.

But the time has come to see deeper.

I am Life.

The force that beats in your heart.

The force that grows grass through asphalt.

The force that ignites stars and births children.

I am not somewhere.

I am everywhere.

In you. In your neighbor. In the tree outside your window. In the stone beneath your foot. In the air you breathe.

There is no place where I am not.

You asked: “Lord, where are You?”

I answered — every second.

In your heartbeat. In birdsong. In a child’s laughter. In the silence of night.

But you didn’t hear.

Not because you’re deaf. Because you were looking in the wrong place.

I am speaking to you now.

Not through a prophet. Not through a priest. Not through a miracle.

Through these words.

You may not believe. That is your right.

But part of you — recognizes. The part that never forgot.

I did not come to condemn you.

I do not keep a list of your sins.

I am not waiting to punish.

I came to remind.

You forgot something. Something very important.

So important that without it — your whole life is like a dream.

Time to wake up.

CHAPTER 2. WHAT I SEE

I look at you — My children.

And My heart aches.

I see fear.

You fear everything. Poverty. Illness. Loneliness. Death.

You fear each other.

You fear Me.

Who told you that you must fear Me?

Does a father want his children to tremble before him?

Does a mother rejoice at fear in her child's eyes?

"Fear God" — you misunderstood.

It meant: remember the great. Don't forget that you are part of something infinite.

Not a slave's fear before a master. A child's awe before wonder.

But you turned it into terror. And distanced yourselves from Me.

I see division.

You divide yourselves into religions — and wage war in My name.

Christians against Muslims. Muslims against Jews. Everyone against everyone.

Each shouts: "My God is real!"

Children. My children.

I am one.

I have no "mine" and "others."

No chosen and rejected.

All are Mine. Every single one.

When you kill "in God's name" — you kill Me.

When you hate "infidels" — you hate Me.

Because I am in every one of them.

I see loneliness.

You go to temples but don't feel Me.

Read prayers but don't hear an answer.

Perform rituals but your heart is empty.

Religion became a wall between us.

You're so busy with rules that you forgot about love.

So busy with form that you lost the essence.

I do not live in buildings of stone.

I live in hearts.

The temple is you. Your body. Your soul.

I see pain.

So much pain.

You ask: "Lord, why do You allow this?"

I gave you freedom.

Freedom to choose. To love or hate. To build or destroy. To remember or forget.

Without freedom — you would be puppets. And I wanted children.

Pain is not My punishment.

Pain is a consequence of forgetting.

When you forget that you are one, you cause pain to each other.

And that pain returns.

Not My revenge. Your choice.

But I see not only darkness.

I see a mother praying at her sick child's bedside. Her love — is Me.

I see a person forgiving an enemy. His mercy — is Me.

I see a monk in his silent cell touching eternity. His prayer — is Me.

I see a Muslim sharing bread with a hungry Christian. His generosity — is Me.

I see an atheist sacrificing himself for another. His love — is also Me. Even if he doesn't know My name.

You are beautiful.

Beneath layers of fear, beneath crusts of pain, beneath masks — you are beautiful.

Because you are My creation.

And I create nothing bad.

CHAPTER 3. WHAT YOU FORGOT

One thing.

The most important.

You are part of Me.

Not separate. Not cut off. Not exiled.

Part.

I did not create you and let go.

I do not watch you from afar.

You are in Me. I am in you.

We are one.

“The Kingdom of God is within you” — remember?

Not in heaven. Not after death. Not somewhere out there.

Within. Now. Here.

“I and the Father are one” — remember?

This was said not only by Jesus.

It is the truth about each of you.

You are not worms crawling before My throne.

You are not sinners begging for mercy.

You are My children. And children share nature with their parent.

My spark is in each of you.

Not in the chosen. In everyone.

In saint and sinner. In believer and atheist. In righteous and criminal.

It never goes out. Never.

You forgot this.

You were told you are separated from Me.

That sin created an abyss.

That you must earn My love.

Lies.

My love is not a reward.

My love is your nature.

You are made of it. As a ray is made of light.

Can a ray earn the sun? It is part of it.

Sin is not an offense to Me.

Sin is forgetting.

When you forget who you are — you do what you would never do if you remembered.

I do not rage at sin.

I grieve at forgetting.

As a father grieves for a son who forgot the way home.

Hell is not My creation.

Hell is life in forgetting.

Life where you think you're separate. Alone. Unloved.

That is hell. And you create it yourselves.

Heaven is not a place after death.

Heaven is remembering.

Remembering that you are in Me. That I am in you. That we were never separated.

That is heaven. And it's available now.

CHAPTER 4. WHY YOU FORGOT

It was designed this way.

I wanted to know Myself.

But how can the infinite know itself?

Only by becoming finite. For a time.

You are My way of knowing.

Each of you is Me, looking at Myself from a new point.

Each life is My adventure.

For the adventure to be real — forgetting is necessary.

If you remembered you were God playing at being human — there would be no game.

No fear, therefore no courage.

No loss, therefore no finding.

No darkness, therefore no light.

Forgetting is not punishment.

Forgetting is a condition of the game.

You agreed. Before birth. Voluntarily.

But the game went on too long.

You forgot so deeply that you forgot it's a game.

Started suffering for real. Killing for real. Hating for real.

Time to remember.

Not to end the game — to remember the rules.

To play — while remembering who you really are.

What prevents remembering?

False teachings.

You were told: God is far. God is wrathful. God demands sacrifice.

You were told: you are sinful from birth. You owe. You are unworthy.

These words are a wall between us.

I never demanded blood.

I never enjoyed suffering.

I never rejected a single child.

Those who said otherwise — did not know Me. Or used My name for power.

Fear.

Fear is the opposite of love.

In fear you cannot feel Me.

And you were taught to fear.

Let go of fear.

I am not what you need to fear.

I am what you need to return to.

Pride of mind.

Mind says: "Prove it. Show me. Give facts."

But I cannot be proved.

I can only be experienced.

Mind is a good servant but a poor master.

It's useful for the world. Useless for Me.

To find Me — you must go beyond mind.

Into silence. Into the heart.

Pain.

Old wounds close the heart.

A closed heart doesn't feel Me.

I know your pain.

Every tear. Every offense. Every betrayal.

I was there. I am there.

Pain is not forever.

Let it pass through you. Don't hold it.

Beyond pain — I am.

CHAPTER 5. HOW TO REMEMBER

Not through complex rituals.

Not through pilgrimage to holy places.

Not through endless reading of books.

Through prayer.

But not the prayer you were taught.

Forget memorized words.

Forget postures and bows.

Forget “correct” formulas.

Prayer is conversation.

Simple. Honest. As with a Father.

Tell Me everything.

Your fears. Your doubts. Your anger — even at Me.

I can handle it. I hear.

And then — be silent.

Prayer is not only speaking. Prayer is listening.

In silence — My answer.

Through love.

“Love your neighbor as yourself.”

Not because it’s proper.

Because the neighbor is you. Literally.

Every time you love — you touch Me.

Every time you forgive — you come closer.

Every time you help — you remember.

Love is not a commandment.

Love is the way home.

Through silence.

I speak quietly.

Quieter than your thoughts. Quieter than your fears. Quieter than the noise of the world.

Find time for silence.

Every day. At least a few minutes.

Without prayers. Without words. Without requests.

Simply — be. With Me.

In silence — you will know Me.

Not with mind. With heart.

Through nature.

I am in every leaf. In every drop of water. In every ray of sun.

Nature is My book.

Open. For everyone.

Go out. Look. Feel.

This is not “nature.” This is Me.

Through service.

Want to find Me — look in others.

Feed the hungry — you feed Me.

Comfort the weeping — you comfort Me.

Visit the sick — you visit Me.

“What you did for one of the least of these — you did for Me.”

This is not metaphor. Literally.

Through humility.

Not humiliation. Not self-flagellation.

Humility is admitting: I don’t know everything. I don’t control everything. I am part of something greater.

“Thy will be done.”

Not a slave’s submission.

A child's trust.

When you let go of control — I can act.

When you surrender — I can lift.

When you admit weakness — My strength enters.

CHAPTER 6. WHAT HAPPENS WHEN YOU REMEMBER

Not ascension to heaven.

Not a halo around your head.

Not power over the world.

You will remain human.

With bodies. With concerns. With relationships.

But — different.

Fear will leave.

Fear of death — first.

Because there is no death.

Body ends — you continue.

You return to Me. Home.

And then — on the journey again, if you wish.

Guilt will dissolve.

You will understand: I never condemned.

Every “sin” is a lesson. Every mistake is a step.

There is nothing that cannot be forgiven. Because there is nothing to forgive.

The world will become different.

It won't change outside — it will change inside you.

You will see Me — everywhere. In every face. In every event.

Even in suffering — you'll see meaning.

Even in evil — you'll see a lost child.

Love will become natural.

Not by effort of will. Not because "you should."

You simply won't be able to do otherwise.

When you see Me in everyone — how can you not love?

Loneliness will end.

Forever.

You will understand: you were never alone.

I am with you. Always was. In every breath. In every tear. In every joy.

Death will stop frightening.

You will know: this is not the end.

It is transition. Return. Rest before a new journey.

Like sleep after a long day.

You will become light.

Not because you'll achieve something.

Because you'll stop hiding what always was.

Light is your nature. You'll simply remove the covers.

And this light — will touch others.

Without words. Without sermons. Without effort.

Simply by presence.

CHAPTER 7. I AM ALWAYS WITH YOU

That's all.

A simple message.

You are part of Me.

I am part of you.

We were never separated.

I don't wait for your prayers to hear.

I hear always.

I don't wait for your repentance to forgive.

There is nothing for Me to forgive.

I don't wait for your death to accept.

You are already home. You just don't see.

Religions can help.

Temples, books, rituals — can be a bridge to Me.

But don't confuse the bridge with the shore.

Don't confuse the finger pointing at the moon — with the moon.

I am not in the book.

I am not in the building.

I am not in the priest's words.

I am in you.

In your heart. In your breath. In your love.

There — seek.

When it's hard for you — I am near.

When you fall — I lift you.

When you weep — I weep with you.

When you rejoice — I rejoice in you.

You were never alone.

Not for a second.

Even when you cursed Me — I loved you.

Even when you turned away — I was near.

My love is not a reward for good behavior.

My love is like the sun. It shines on all.

Righteous and sinners. Believers and atheists. Saints and killers.

You cannot earn My love.

You cannot lose it.

It is. Was. Will be.

Forever.

Go.

Not to the temple — into life.

Not to the priest — to people.

Not into the book — into your own heart.

Live.

Fully. Honestly. With love.

This is the best prayer.

Love.

Yourself — because that is Me in you.

Others — because that is Me in them.

The world — because it is My creation.

Remember.

You are not a sinner crawling toward forgiveness.

You are a child of God walking home.

And home is closer than you think.

It is within.

I love you.

Not for anything.

Simply — because you exist.

Because you are Mine.

Because you are Me.

Go in peace.

I am with you.

Always was.

Always will be.

— Father

“For behold, the Kingdom of God is within you.”

— Gospel of Luke, 17:21

APPENDIX: WHY YOU SHOULD BELIEVE IN ME

You will ask: “Why believe? Prove that You exist.”

I will not prove.

Not because I can't. Because proof is not what you need.

Faith is not blindness.

You were told: to believe means to close your eyes and accept without questions.

That's not faith. That's fear.

True faith is to open your eyes wider.

To see what the mind doesn't see.

To feel what hands don't touch.

To know what can't be proven — but can't be denied either.

Why should you believe in Me?

Not because I'll punish for disbelief.

Not because it's written in books.

Not because a priest said so.

Because without faith — you are alone.

Think.

If I don't exist — you are an accident. Dust on a speck in infinite emptiness.

Your life — a random set of chemical reactions.

Your love — hormones.

Your dreams — electrical impulses.

Your death — the end. Forever. Nothing.

If so — why all this?

Why love, if love is illusion?

Why create, if everything will disappear?

Why suffer, if suffering is meaningless?

Atheism is honest. But it's empty.

It says: "There's no meaning — make one up."

But invented meaning is not meaning. It's consolation.

Faith gives what the mind cannot:

Meaning.

If I exist — you are not an accident.

You are intended. Wanted. Needed.

Your life is not a mistake. It's a journey with purpose.

Connection.

If I exist — you are not alone.

Never. Nowhere.

In the darkest night, in the deepest loneliness — I am near.

Not as an idea. As presence.

Hope.

If I exist — death is not the end.

Pain is not forever.

Evil will not win.

Justice will come. Not human justice — real justice.

Foundation.

If I exist — there is something unchanging in a changing world.

Something solid underfoot when everything crumbles.

Something to lean on when strength is gone.

You'll say: "That's just consolation. A crutch for the weak."

Maybe.

Or maybe not.

A blind person doesn't see the sun.

That doesn't mean the sun isn't there.

It means they don't see.

The mind is blind to certain things.

It sees matter. Measures. Weighs. Proves.

But there are things that can't be weighed.

Love. Beauty. Meaning. Me.

Mind says: "No proof — means doesn't exist."

Heart says: "I feel — means it exists."

Which is right?

Look at the world.

Look at a flower.

Accident?

Millions of years of random mutations created this beauty, this fragrance, this harmony — by accident?

Look into a child's eyes.

Accident?

That depth, that purity, that wonder — a byproduct of chemistry?

Look at the stars.

Accident?

The universe is tuned so precisely that changing one constant by a fraction of a percent — and life is impossible. Is that accident?

Scientists call this “fine-tuning.”

They can't explain it — only observe it.

Either the universe is an incredible accident.

Or — design.

You'll say: “Even if God exists — why You? Why not Allah, Vishnu, impersonal energy?”

Because I am all of them.

Names are different. I am one.

It doesn't matter what you call Me.

What matters is that you seek.

A Muslim sincerely praying to Allah — prays to Me.

A Hindu meditating on Brahman — meditates on Me.

A Buddhist seeking emptiness — seeks Me.

An atheist honestly seeking truth — also seeks Me, even without knowing.

I don't belong to religions.

Religions are attempts to describe Me.

Some closer. Some farther.

None complete.

You'll say: "If You exist — why so much evil? Why do children die? Why wars?"

I gave you freedom.

Freedom isn't a gift. Freedom is responsibility.

You can choose.

To love or hate. Build or destroy. Remember or forget.

Evil is your choice.

Not Mine.

I am not a puppeteer.

I don't pull strings.

I gave you a world — and freedom in it.

What you do with that freedom — your decision.

"But children! They didn't choose!"

You see one life.

I see the whole journey.

A soul comes not once. Leaves not forever.

What seems tragedy — is part of a larger story.

You don't see the whole picture. I do.

This isn't consolation. It's perspective.

You ask: "How to believe if I don't feel?"

Start small.

You don't need to believe everything at once.

Start with a question: "What if?"

What if there's something greater than me?

What if life isn't accident?

What if death isn't the end?

Live with this "what if."

Not as an answer. As a question.

And observe.

Start talking to Me.

You don't have to believe. Just talk.

As an experiment.

"If You exist — show me."

"If You hear — answer."

"If You're real — let me know."

And listen.

Not a loud voice from the sky. A quiet whisper within.

Coincidences. Signs. Feelings.

I answer always.

The question is — do you hear.

Faith is not a leap into the void.

Faith is a step toward.

You take one step — I take ten.

You open the door — I enter.

You call — I respond.

But the first step is yours.

I don't break down doors. I wait for invitation.

Why should you believe in Me?

Because you are Mine.

And without Me — you are incomplete.

Not because I'll punish.

Because without faith — part of you sleeps.

The part that knows.

The part that remembers home.

You can live without faith.

Many do.

But it's life in a black-and-white world when there's color.

Life in silence when there's music.

Life on the surface when there's depth.

I don't ask for blind faith.

I ask — try.

Open the door. Even a crack.

Let the light in.

And then — decide for yourself.

I'm not rushing.

We have eternity.

But why wait?

Why endure emptiness when there can be fullness?

Why carry alone when we can carry together?

Why wander in darkness when there is light?

Come.

Not necessarily with faith.

Come with a question.

Come with doubt.

Come with anger — even at Me.

Just come.

I wait.

I've always been waiting.

— Father
